2 O'CLOCK. THE TWO SIDES OF THE SUGAR TRUST. 2 O'CLOCK.

MONOPOLY AND LUXURY.

A Type of the Sugar King and His Surrounding Splendors.

Comforts and Extravagances Purchased by Profits on Sugar.

Everything that Wish or Imagination Might Possibly Suggest.

The most conspicuous figure in that band of millionaires who compose the despotism of the sugar trust, against which public indignation is at the present time so bitterly directed, is Theodore H. Havemeyer.

He is the leading spirit of this gigantic monopoly that has been created under the law. It was he who first conceived the idea of organizing the refineries of the country under a single management, and it was chiefly through his efforts that the scheme was finally carried into successful operation.

As a reward for his services he is now the President of the Trust, which bids fair to become one of the most powerful combinations of capital ever formed for the purpose of controlling production and prices, and of substituting for free competition among manufacturers an absolute monopoly.

One of the most remarkable facts in connection with Mr. Havemeyer's career is that, despite the importance of the position which he now occupies and his previous success as a merchant, he has always managed to keep himself out of public view.

THE HEAD OF HIS FAMILY.

Theodore Havemeyer, however, is the head of his family as well as king pin in the sugar business, and his individual wealth is said to be as great as that of all his brothers and cousins combined.

Exactly how much that is no one seems to know, even among his most intimate friends, but it is variously estimated from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000, with the probabilities in favor of its reaching nearly the higher figure.

F. C. Havemeyer, the father of Theodore, is now a man well advanced in years, and for chased the magnificent residence at Madison avenue and Thirty-eighth street, which he still occupies and which is one of the largest private residences in town.

LUXURY CALLED.

It is luxuriously furnished throughout. Formerly he used to give sumptuous entertainments here to his friends, and balls and dinners were the order in the winter season.

Of late years he has not entertained so much, his wife having no taste for gay social life, and he himself being a man of quiet habits.

He has indulged his taste for fine horse flesh to a liberal degree and has kept as many as forty horses at a time in his stables at Seventy-second street and Riverside drive. He owns about thirty at the present time.

These are all coaching and saddle horses of the most expensive kind, and he never owned a racer. Whenever he saw a fine span of carriage horses or a thoroughbred riding horse that took his fancy he would buy at once without asking the price.

At the present time he is enlarging his stables adjoining his residence on Madison avenue, and will keep about a dozen horses there next winter. Formerly he was only able to keep four.

Mr. Havemeyer has always been a prominent member of the New York Coaching Club, though he has not driven much for the past three or four years. He is also a member of the Coney Island Jockey and Monmouth Park associations, and other driving clubs, as well as the New York and Seawanhaka Yacht clubs. He does not, however, own a yacht now.

He is also a member of the Union and Knickerbocker clubs.

His summer residence is at Newport, where he owns one of the finest villas on Bellevue avenue. It is a large frame house with beautiful verandas and piazzas, and is surrounded by extensive grounds magnificently laid out. Directly on the opposite side of the avenue is the summer residence of Mrs. William Astor.

Mr. Havemeyer does most of his entertaining at a Newport mansion never passes without one or two grand balls and many summer parties at the Havemeyer mansion in this city.

He has nine children, the two eldest of whom are married. One is Mrs. Edward Potter, who married a nephew of Bishop Potter and lives in Longmeadow, N. Y., and the other is Mrs. William Mayer, who lives at the Havemeyer farm at Mahwah, N. J., her husband having charge of it.

The oldest son, Charles, is employed in his father's office. The other children, three boys and three girls, range in age from ten to eighteen years and are still at school.

HEAD OF THE SUGAR TRUST.

Mr. Havemeyer is a well-built man of commanding figure, being over six feet tall and of florid complexion. He wears iron gray unbuttoned-up whiskers and is inclined to baldness.

He is a man who enjoys good living, and he gets it. About fifteen years ago he purchased the property, which contains between six and seven hundred acres, was purchased for $100,000, and is now worth $1,000,000.

Even when Mr. Havemeyer is away with his family at Newport or in the summer, or engaged in sumptuous entertaining at his Madison avenue palace during the winter season, he seldom lets a week pass without a visit to "Mountain Side Farm," as he has named it.

kept in racks apart from the cows, and are fed by hand from the day they are dropped.

IN THE BULL SHED.

In the bull shed there are six magnificent animals, each one being kept in a large stall by himself, with a little yard to run about in.

The most famous of the lot is Canada's John Bull, which is a recent acquisition of the farm. The others are Kister Hugo Poles, Carlo Boy, Gildroy III, and Farmer's Pride.

Two thousand one hundred pounds of milk is yielded daily. Most of this is used in making butter.

FANCY STOCK-RAISING.

There is scarcely a branch of fancy stock-raising, with the exception of breeding horses, that is not carried on at Mountain Side Farm, and each on a most magnificent scale.

Mr. Havemeyer's chief weakness seems to be for blooded cattle, and he has now the largest herd of registered Jerseys to be found anywhere in this country upon one farm. The only other that approaches it in size is that of a well-known fancy cattle raiser at West Randolph, N. Y.

250,000 WORTH OF JERSEY CATTLE.

The herd belonging to the Sugar King numbers 250 head all told at the present time, both young and old. Every one is registered, and every animal has an illustrious pedigree. They would bring at auction about $200,000.

Mr. Havemeyer began to stock his farm with Jerseys soon after he bought it, and the number in which they are all kept, fitted with separate stalls for each, was erected in 1880.

It was 370 feet long and about 75 feet wide originally, and has since been built at each end since then, 130 feet long for each side and of equal width with the first structure. In addition to this there is a large barn for calves, 200 feet long, and a separate barn for the bulls.

SOME OF THE FAMOUS ANIMALS.

Among some of the more famous animals in Mr. Havemeyer's stock at the present time is Mary Anne, of St. Lawrence's, which is considered to be the best milk cow in the world. She was sired by Stoke Poles, III., is ten years old, and has an official record of 36 pounds 12 1/2 ounces of butter for seven days, and of 967 pounds for a year. She was purchased about a year ago by Mr. Havemeyer in Canada.

Others are Sultan IV., Mermoid of St. Lambert's, Young Commaise, and Elastic, all cows with fine pedigrees and great milk and butter records, whose value is estimated all the way from $10,000 down, while there is probably not a cow in the herd which could not be sold for at least $500.

CAREFULLY TENDED DAY AND NIGHT.

All the milk cows are kept in the barn during the day, and are milked twice a day. They are fed three times, and are only turned out to pasture at night. This is done to make the milk richer.

They are all well looked after, and are kept in the best of health. They are fed with the best of food, and are kept in the best of health.

THE BULL SHED.

In summer as well as in winter the cattle are fed upon fodder which is preserved in the immense chaffage cellars, that are connected with the barns. Every arrangement for convenience and comfort is there, and every improvement known to stock-farming is put into effect.

THE LARVA OF THE SUGAR KING.

The larva itself was built in Boston and transported piece by piece in freight cars to its present site.

NO COMMON FOWL IN THIS HENNERY.

The next thing that would attract the attention of the visitor at Mr. Havemeyer's farm would be the hennery. No ordinary mongrel barn-yard fowls have any abiding place here. Only the pure breeds of poultry are raised, and on a scale which, for poultry, is fully as extensive and elaborate as that for the fancy cattle.

There are several large buildings devoted to the chicken tribe, each of which is partitioned off into several compartments, by which means different varieties of fowls are kept separate for breeding purposes.

Each compartment has a long, narrow run out of doors, probably 100 feet long, for its special occupants, which is fenced in with wire netting. There are forty or fifty of these altogether, and they represent almost as many separate and distinct breeds of fowl.

A big grass lot is fenced in by wire netting and is used for the raising of young chickens, and is used for the raising of young chickens, and is used for the raising of young chickens.

unparagoned breed of animal of any kind. Consequently his pigs are also blooded.

They are all black pigs of the Berkshire variety, and a finer looking set of porkers would be hard to find. He has two big yards full of young pigs, each yard being filled up with pigs of a uniform size.

THE SHEEP FOLD.

On the other end of the farm, up on the side hill, on the elevated part, is quite as interesting as the piggery, and has at least some connection with it, because the same man takes care of both the pigs and the sheep. In fact, he divides his time about equally between them.

These sheep have the best care and pasturage in the world, and their pen is a large, comfortable building right on the protected slope of a little hill near the new house which Mr. Havemeyer is building for his married daughter, Mrs. Meyer. The pen is a neat and clean as the rest of the place, and is like all the other buildings on the place, even including the pig-pens.

AND DUCKS.

A large flock of white Pekin ducks, a drove of turkeys, geese, and a pair of gorgeous peacocks complete the list of the live stock on Mr. Havemeyer's farm, not including the thirty farm horses and four carriage horses which occupy the stables.

ABOUT FORTY MEN are employed on the farm all the time, and just now they have an addition to their force in the carpenters, builders and laborers engaged in the construction of the new house for Mrs. Meyer. The old farm-house, which Mr. Havemeyer retained and enlarged, has heretofore always been occupied by the owner whenever he came to Mountain Side Farm.

There was plenty of room there for himself and his nine children, whom he always likes to have with him, but now, however, he has decided to build this new house for his eldest daughter.

It is now nearly ready for occupancy, and is a solid, substantial looking structure of grand proportions. The material is brick, with brown-stone trimmings, and it is built in the style of the old, rambling English manor houses, full of queer nooks and corners.

It will cost, when finished, about $170,000, and is being built by Boston and Newport firms. The interior is magnificently finished in hard oak and the halls and stairways are grand and imposing.

A MAGNIFICENT SITE.

The house stands at the top of a small hill and is a conspicuous object for a long distance in both directions from the river, which winds up the valley. Men are now engaged in grading the hill, building up terraces and laying out the grounds, which will come to an estimated $20,000. This also is done under contract by a Newport firm.

Mr. Havemeyer always spends about six weeks at Mountain Side Farm in the summer with his family. This year they came in April and remained till the first week in June, when they went to Newport.

OPEN HOUSE IN THE FALL.

In the Fall there is always a lot of entertaining, and during the months of September, October and November the house is kept open house. His guests are sometimes numbered by the score, and he gives every one of them the best that the land affords. There are usually a lot of big parties.

Mr. Havemeyer's son-in-law, Mr. Meyer, lives at the farm all the year round and manages the property and looks after things generally.

OPPRESSION AND POVERTY.

The Unfortunate Poor and Their Cheerless Surroundings.

Privations and Hardships Caused by the Profits on Sugar.

Nothing but Barest Necessaries of Life, and Not Always Those.

It is the very poor who most feel the hardships caused by the sugar monopoly. Here is one type of how they live:

There are many rookeries along James, Oak, Catherine, Roosevelt and Dey streets, but perhaps the most miserable territory in the present is the spot known as the "Double Alley."

The double alley is a long passageway, about 300 feet long and 14 feet wide, with a row of houses along each side.

The poorer classes swarm into the barracks that line the alley because the apartments are rented at low rates. The alley is just in the rear of the Oak street station-house.

It begins on the west side of Cherry street
